

A NEW SONG ON O'CONNELL AND THE TINKERS

Your Sens of th Shamrock attend to my ditty
I'm sure: it will say its a commenda- one
To miss such a jo e I'm sure its a pity
For our brave Irish boys they r the fe low- for fun
Those lines I extend to o people or party
To jeer or o either say hurch or sta e
But only to his en & grant your attention
Some tricks tha' are un-ey for me to r late

When Daniel O'Connell he first went to London
He then took his claim -s a member for Clare
The Cockney's all asser to ee crowd- around him
For the cheers of our Irishmen ren-odd the air
In order to see the great man of the people
The John Bull in thousands fast gather d-er und
And some of the boys wen to his & to o k him
But Irish sheltias came crack on their crown

One day through the streets as brave Dan he was walking
A party of Co kneys to view him t ey stood
And in order to h n bug the Mourrock of Ireland
One pull' out a not- & says s r is that good
To answer the questi- n brave Dan was ot leary
The note to his job he consid in a trice
When ask'd to return it he said to the fellow
Sure I am a counsell r & must be paid for m advice

The biter bei g & tithen you may gn ss his eritation
To the rest of his friend- he beg u to compla n
When he th-ought or th- joke & how much it had cost him
He swore th t h'd never joke with a la yer ag in
Some more of his l ke ins-ter- on Da iel
If your patience hold out boys the truth I will tell
His two Irish Tinkers came over to Loudon
And fell out with the Land ord of th City Ho ell

Then straight to O'Conn-ll repair'd these bold Tinkers
And when they relate d their comm-ial jast
How the Land ord most oughly had put them out
And they hope'd tha- his bouyt- would find them redress
Two suits of black cloaths D-er put on the Tink rs
And told them their bug-ets or to lay aside
G-oves of gr en shammy their black han's o cover
Had tools in their trunks that was both la ge & wide

It was early next morning the waiter conveid them
With their tools & the r budgets into the same house
The Landlord he said ed & h- welcome'd the party
They spared neather pudding spiced porter or rin
In his grand department they took up their quarters Provisions being plenty they lock'd then s lves in
Its early next morni g the two Irish Tinkers
They up-ek'd their budgets & ro work did begin

The Landlord he started & call'd up the waiter
Half frightend & nat e t he jump'd out of bed
And knock'd at the door of the two Irish Tinkers
Still as the knock'd louder the more noise they make
His wife scolding & fighting get up in a passion
The Tinkers they la-g'd while th y hammer'd away
Well knowing the Landlord could not dispo-ess them
As long as their bill th-y continued to pay

It- for four days then they kept up the hammering
The Landlord he offer'd them on th- fou th day
Ten pounds bet wa- glad to make it an hundred
Before he n-uld get these bold Tinkers away
From the time Dan O'Connell he d st was Flected
The rights o-uld brin h- strove to maintain
Let them nev- a more think of a j-ke on the 1-1th
For they h- never play tricks on our lawyers again
